DAILY Warm-Up Name _____ Date _____

NELSON MANDELA

Nelson Mandela was born in Transkei, South Africa, on July 18, 1918. He was the first member of his family to attend school. A Methodist teacher gave him the name "Nelson" at school. He continued in school and later attended the University of South Africa in Johannesburg. He became a lawyer representing those who would otherwise go without legal assistance.

Mandela was first involved in nonviolent protests but was eventually arrested for treason and placed in prison. He was fighting against the apartheid and the treatment of his people. Apartheid was the practice of keeping the races separated in South Africa. Locked in his cell for years on end, Nelson's spirit was not broken. Nelson Mandela spent 27 years in prison. Most of this time was spent in a tiny cell on Robben Island. His captivity became widely publicized. He was considered a terrorist when he was imprisoned, but as time wore on, it became apparent that he was treated unjustly in his fight to end apartheid.

Once released from prison, Nelson Mandela went on to receive hundreds of awards. He received the Nobel Peace Prize which many felt was also a tribute to the people of South Africa as much as to him. On April 27, 1994, Nelson Mandela was elected President of South Africa. He served until 1999. He continued to work pushing for peace throughout the world. In South Africa, he is known as Madiba, which is an honorary title. Nelson Mandela continues to inspire many.

hospitable, sensitive, supportive and gay. We enjoy beautiful sunsets and sunrises, pure and fresh air, the fragrance of the rugged tropical jungle, big and beautiful beaches, majestic rivers, and colorful birds that fly around our green blue seas.

Our most representative celebration is SAN PACHO festival Which begins on September 20 and finishes on October 4. In this time, people go out to the troupes in fantasy costumes. People go to the open air dance and they eat soup of the three meats: Smoked meat, salted meat and fresh meat. People go behind the disguises singing and dancing. Oh, my Godness! The bunde or revulu, that is a joy! because people are very happy shouting like crazy. They hug each other, greet each other, and stop for a moment to greet the spectators and take pictures.

Come to Chocó and visit our tourist places, enjoy our typical dishes, recreate your sight looking at beautiful women, WOOF, The risk is that you can stay forever in my beautiful land, which dances, sings and enchants. Welcome to Chocó.

Exhausted!

Roy was always tired when he woke up in the morning. "I really can't understand it," his brother said. "You go to bed earlier than I do and you get up later. I know you sleep well because you snore a lot! In fact, you sometimes keep me awake half the night! So why are you tired in the morning? It doesn't make sense!" "Perhaps it's because I dream so much," Roy suggested. "But dreaming is good for you," his brother told him. "All the doctors and psychiatrists agree about that."

"Maybe," Roy replied. "But the trouble is, I always dream about hard work! Last night, for example, I dreamt I was a miner. I went down the mine almost as soon as I fell asleep - and I dreamt that I was digging coal all night long. I was worn out in the morning! Then, a few nights ago, I dreamt I was a sailor. I was on one of those old-fashioned sailing ships. We were crossing the Atlantic and there was a terrific storm. We had to struggle for hours to stop the ship from going down. It's always like that. In the past few weeks, I've dreamt I was a waiter, a lorry driver and a football player. I never have a nice easy job!" "I was reading an article about sleep in a magazine the other day," his brother said. "The writer's advice was: try to relax before you go to sleep." "But how?" Roy asked. "Well, why don't you listen to some music? Something pleasant." Roy was willing to try anything. However, what sort of music? He liked pop music, but that was probably too noisy. So he decided to play some classical music and, just before he went to bed that night, he put on a CD of Mozart. In fifteen minutes, he was fast asleep. "Well?" his brother asked him at breakfast next morning. "Did it work?" Roy yawned. "Well," he said, "I didn't dream about hard work for once. I dreamt I was conducting an orchestra. The trouble was, the players were not very good and we had to keep on playing the same piece repeatedly. In the end, we practised all night! I can tell you, I feel more tired this morning than I usually do!"
